GOODISON, OAKLAND TOWNSHIP, MICHIGAN

Oakland Township Remembered...1960 - 1980

*Through the lens of Edward R. Noble
Oakland Township Michigan*

Paint Creek rushing through historic Goodison, morning fog hanging over the Martin's sheep farm, the railroad tracks headed north, hot air balloons floating over fields, tractors in spring... the hills on Adams Road on the daily commute, wire fencing holding in grazing horses... our township in a simpler time.

From the 1960s on Oakland Press photojournalist Edward Noble recorded day-to-day life as Oakland Township transformed from its rural roots to a residential community . Ed Noble began picking up his camera and capturing his backyard, his view across the road, the views of his neighbors at work in the fields, driving to work, the nearby children play in fresh snow, the barns along Snell Road... While living on Gunn Road for over 20 years, Ed memorialized the last half of the 20th century before the Millennium turned for all of us.

Mr. Noble has generously donated his collection of 'a wonderful life and time in Oakland Township' to the Oakland Township Historical Society (OTHS) which has assembled a selection of these poignant black and white photographs for this very special exhibit.

Free Admission. Open to the Public.

Generously funded by our Exhibit sponsors.
